

Supply and Demand: Grom Gear

February 7, 2011

By Tawnya Schultz

If there's one market that continues to grow each season, it's groom gear. It used to be that only a handful of brands made gear for anyone under 10, and the selection was subpar to say the least. With kids on the come-up now more than ever, a company is missing out if it's not cashing in on the parents who will pay the price for their kid to look the part. Even babies are getting the royal treatment. Here are a few staff pics to keep your kid looking stylin' on the slopes. Just make sure you leave out those ridiculous looking clown hats on your list.

Stonz

Booties

For children up to 3 years old, the Stonz Booties are a necessity for mini's who want to roll around in the snow. How cute!

Usually [$43] on sale now for [$24]
